ALL COAL PEACE PLANS FAIL.

RITUMINOUS OPERATORS REJECT MINERS OFFER.

Western Pennsylvania Producers Join With Union Against Illinois, Indiana and Ohio Operators-Scale Proposed by

Mitchell and Robbins Finds No Favor.

INDIANAPOLIS. March 22 .- The breach between the Ohio. Indiana and Illinois operators on one side and the western Pennsylvonia operators and miners on the other now seems irreparable, and unless something unforseen and wholly unprovided for at this time occurs there will be a strike in the soft coal fields, followed doubtless by a strike in the anthracite

The miners and operators joint scale committee was in session the entire day and proposition after proposition was made and voted down, or rather failed to carry because unanimous consent could not be gotten. The western Pennsylvania operators, headed by Francis L. Robbins, stood squarely with the miners on nearly every proposition which they advanced and the operators of Indiana, Ohio and Illinois stood as firmly against it, and thus every question was lost.

Late this afternoon the miners apparently played their last card when they proposed that the scale of 1903, the one in force before the reduction of 5.5 per cent was made, be adopted to continue for two years. This motion carried with it not only the scale of wages then in force bus all the working conditions about the mines. That was what President Mitchell and President Robbins of the Pittsburg Coal Company had agreed upon before the miners and operators were asked to meet again in conference.

The operators were not surprised at the concessions made by the miners but were evidently prepared for them. Before entering the joint conference the operators of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio had held a little caucus of their own and had decided that they would not accept anything but the present mining scale. In other words, they separated themselves from the western Pennsylvania operators and determined that the Robbins-Mitchell compromise, as it has become known, should be rejected when offered.

They were therefore prepared to vote upon it and twelve votes were cast against the proposition, and the miners sixteen and the western Pennsylvania operators' four votes were cast for it. Not being unanimous, the motion failed.

President Mitchell showed a great deal of feeling when the votes were cast and was evidently greatly depressed by the result. the had been assured by Robbins that the operators could not afford to refuse this olive branch if it were held out by the miners and Robbins was quite as much nettled as was Mitchell when the operators of the three States so unanmously rejected th.

Had Robbins showed his hand less plainly, that is, had he not indicated that he proposed to leave his old friends of years and stand with the miners, the result might have been different, but the prejudice against him has become so strong that anything emanating from him or thought to be approved by him is objectionable to his fellow operators of other States, so it was with something like satisfaction that they rejected what they knew to be a thing they rejected what they knew to be a thing that he and Mitchell had approved before that he and Mitchell had approved before the joint conference met.

Seeing that the compromise proposition of the miners had been rejected, and feeling that further contention would be useless, while something might be devised if a breathing spell should intervene, Mitchell moved to adjourn, and the joint conference broke up, to meet again at 9 o'clock to-morbroke up, to meet again at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

According to leading miners President
Mitchell is up against the most difficult proposition of his life, and there are those in the organization who are not sorry that the present crisis has come.

Mitchell looks upon peace in the anthracite fields as impossible if the bituminous scale is not made, for the anthracite operators have used the same arguments against an have used the same arguments against an increase that the bituminous operators have employed, and in the former field an added employed, and in the former held an added difficulty, that of recognizing the union, exists, to say nothing of the eight hour demand, which has also been refused.

According to the report of Secretary-Treasurer Wilson, delivered at the last convention, there is only about $300,000 in the national treasury and the officers of the organization concede that this is too small a sum to defray the expenses of a general a sum to defray the expenses of a general Some of the operators believe that the judgment of the miners will prevail better judgment of the miners will prevail in the end and that they will accept the offer to adopt the present scale, with its working conditions, but many of the members de-clare that that will not be done.

There is a vague hope on the part of the miners that President Roosevelt will in some way enter into the negotiations and that his influence will hying the operators.

that his influence will bring the operators to accept the 1903 scale, which they say is their final proposition.

They are looking to Mitchell, too, as a man who has an unplayed card up his sleeve, but there is no evidence that the miners' chief has resources which have not been brought into the combat. Leading operators say the President is not likely to bring any pressure to bear for a settlement, for business conditions do not justify an increase over the present scale and it will not be granted.

MINERS WELL OFF, THEY SAY.

Anthracite Companies Give Out Some Figures of Wilkesbarre Bank Deposits.

Both the anthracite coal carrying com panies and the independent operators agreed yesterday that if a strike takes place on April 1 no one will be seriously inconvenienced unless consumers take fright when they are not justified.

The carrying companies have been going into figures based on the actual earnings of the miners since the strike of 1902 to show that the miners never were as pros-perous as now. The result was made pub-lic yesterday evening in the following statement:

If dollars in bank are a criterion of prosperity the Wilkesbarre anthracite mining region is more than half again as prosperous now than it was four years ago. In January, 1902, the year of the strike, the nine banks and trust companies of Wilkesbarre had total deposits of $12,503,329.39. With peace declared and mines working regularly, the next three years saw money piling into the financial in-stitutions and the statements of the same banks for January, 1906, show total deposits of $19,500,724.87, a gain of nearly seven millions,

Every one of the banks shows a large gain. ranging from 26 to 146 per cent. The savings institutions, where the thrifty of the miners deposit their earnings, have shared largely in the prosperity.

The increase in the general prosperity of the district may be seen in a comparison of the Wilkesbarre bank clearings of 1902, which were $39,418,626.65, with those of 1905, when the total mounted to $51,897,937.69, a gain of about $12,500,000, or 31 per cent , hi three years

A representative of Robinson, Hayden & Co., one of the largest of the firms of independent operators, said vesterday that he did not believe that a strike would last very long. The independent operators had no coal in reserve, as they could not mine it fast enough for the demand, but their customers had it.

"There was little or no demand for coal to speak of during January and February and speak of during sanuary and reordary and the early part of this month," he said. "but the early part of this month," he said. "but within the last two weeks since the strike talk began everybody seems to have been filling his cellar. They take their chances of losing money, for if there is no strike price is $300,000 gold.

the customary summer reduction in price will probably be granted."

Asked what would become of the big reserve held by the companies, he said:

"That will not be touched until the strike in progress, and will be handled with care. The companies will see that all the railroads, repair shops, ice plants, factories and other concerns which need coal summer and winter are supplied first."

U.S. STEEL TO MINE ITS OWN COAL Plans to Keep Mills Running Whether Miners Strike or Not.

PITTSBURG, March 22.-As fast as they can be secured, men are being rushed to the mines of the United States Steel Corporation, and it is expected the output of these mines will be trebled within a few weeks. With what the company can furnish from its own mines and with the immense stocks on hand, it is believed the mills can all be kept going until the coming strike has been settled one way or the other.

The steel company owns 32,724 acres of coal land, exclusive of the coking coal. Last year it mined 2,204,950 tons of coal. It is the policy of the concern, however, to save this coal for future years, and with this object in view a contract was made last year with the Pittsburg Coal Company to furnish it not less than eight million tons of coal a year for twenty-five years.

Had the strike not threatened this year, the company would have taken out much less of its own coal. With what it can now mine and the stock it has on hand, it is believed all mills can be kept running in full until the field can be sufficiently developed to supply all the coal needed.

The miners have are greatly disturbed.

The miners here are greatly disturbed over the threat of F. L. Robbins to break away from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio operaway from thinois, indiana and Ohlo operators. They do not want this, as it would break up the interstate agreement, and this agreement is what has brought the present good conditions in the soft coal field.

TO MERGE PAPER FACTORIES. Plan to Combine Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York Concerns.

PITTSBURG, March 22 .- Pittsburg capitalists and a number of representatives of paper manufacturing companies are planning a merger of the larger plants in New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Under the plan outlined it is proposed to increase the capital stock of the Straw Pulp and Paper Manufacturing Company of New York to $25,000,000. This is to be the leading concern in the new movement.

Options have been taken on a number of properties. A large part of the money for the merger is being raised in Pittsburg. The first step was taken to-day when, through the Corporation Trust and Development Company of Pitteburg, the Straw Pulp and Paper Manufacturing Company got control of the Twin City Mill at Baltimore, Ohio. The amount involved in this deal was close to $150,000. The controlling interest was held in the plant by Hugh McElroy of Pitteburg and others associated with local paper

We are not dealing with anybody at present, but the impression must not be drawn from this that the case is hopeless. There are plenty of interests after parts of the prop prienty of interests after parts of the properties, and these could be sold instantly; but we still have hope of selling the railroads and mines in a lump. There is no particular hurry, and everything will be cleared up in time."

CHICAGO, March 22.-Rogers, Brown & Co., in a statement issued to-day regarding the pig iron market, say:

For the former period more business was booked this week than the week preceding. Prices North and South are unchanged and the quiet trading going on is practically all at full prices. Total tonnage of trans-actions for the week would be surprising to those who have been maintaining that the iron market is stagnant."
